

Editorial

Dear members of the editorial board, referees, authors, and readers of Biologia Plantarum,

Due to my age, I recognized that now it is the right time to make a change at the position of editor-in-chief. The director of our Institute and the Institution Board appointed Dr. rer. nat. Ing. Helena Plchová as a new editor-in-chief of Biologia Plantarum from 1st September 2020. I think that it was a good choice as she is not only an outstanding scientist in the field of molecular biology but also a good organizer. For the time being, the other members of the editorial office remain to work for the journal.

I have always greatly appreciated a perfect cooperation with all of you. Thank you very much for all of the work done and attention paid to our journal. Editors or referees of a scientific journal must be enthusiastic for their work, and the quality of the journal is always directly dependent on their quality. The work of editors and referees is not visible to public, but is necessary for the peer-review system.

My thanks also go to the authors who submitted their manuscripts and who were then willing to revise them to meet requirements of Instructions to authors and suggestions of referees and editors. Hence, I am much obliged to their effort to improve the quality of the papers published in Biologia Plantarum.

Finally, I also appreciate all of you - scientists, university teachers, students, and others - who visit our website, because in fact, the journal is made for you.

I wish you a good cooperation with the new editor-in-chief, a great success in your scientific work, and a good luck in your personal life.
